

HealthRIGHT 360 Recovery Residence Program on Treasure Island in San Francisco
Facilitating healthcare, recovery, self-sufficiency

HealthRIGHT 360's Recovery Residence Program (RRP) is an innovative model that connects people who are at risk of homelessness with substance use disorder treatment. Specifically designed for people whose ability to participate in outpatient services is jeopardized by a lack of housing, the RRP is a transitional program serving adults of all genders stepping down from residential addiction treatment.

The Recovery Residence Program has 72 beds in a recently renovated, home-like environment that includes a spacious back yard. The program is staffed by Recovery Coaches who provide mentorship and support around recovery, finding and maintaining a job, building social connectivity, self-esteem, and goal setting. Participants can stay in the program for up to 24 months while they are accessing outpatient substance use disorder treatment at the program of their choice.

Funded by the San Francisco Department of Public Health and the California Department of Health Care Services, the program provides a supportive, recovery-oriented environment. Corresponding outpatient substance use disorder treatment takes place offsite in licensed outpatient programs by the provider of each individual client's choice. This can be at one of HealthRIGHT 360's outpatient programs in the Mission District, Civic Center, Bayview, or near the Panhandle, or at another program of the client's choosing. No treatment or mental health services take place on the RRP premises.

Eligibility: The Recovery Residence Program is open to adults of all gender expressions who are stepping down from a residential substance use disorder treatment program into outpatient services.
